ARCHITECTURAL DESCRIPTION

The diminutive Bungalow at 29 Prospect Street is set on a wooded lot two hundred feet from the road. Built around 1940, it displays features typical of the period: prominent roof, wood shingled walls, deep eaves and a cut-away porch. The four by two-bay plan is lit by a combination of fixed sash, bay windows and double-hung sash. The principal entry is under the front porch. A brick chimney rises from the east (left) side elevation and a cobblestone example from the west. The house is well maintained and is smaller than other Bungalows in the town, such as those at 129 Maple* and 32 Maple Street*.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE

Assessor's information indicates the Bungalow at 29 Street was constructed in 1940 and enlarged with the addition of a porch in 1962. The setting was amid alternating swaths of pasture and forest in 1939 according to WPA maps from that year. The existence of a stable is also noted by the assessor's office, suggesting the presence of horses, but nothing of the kind is visible from the road.
