

Stannox Farm Watertower

Intersection of Mill and Nason Hill

Form No. 900

Town Sherborn
Address Near Mill Street, Nason Hill intersection

Name Stannox Farm Watertower

Use, 1981 Unused reservoir

Owner, 1981 David Howland

Type of Structure Tower for water storage

Constructed Late 19th century

Source

Construction material Rubblestone and wood

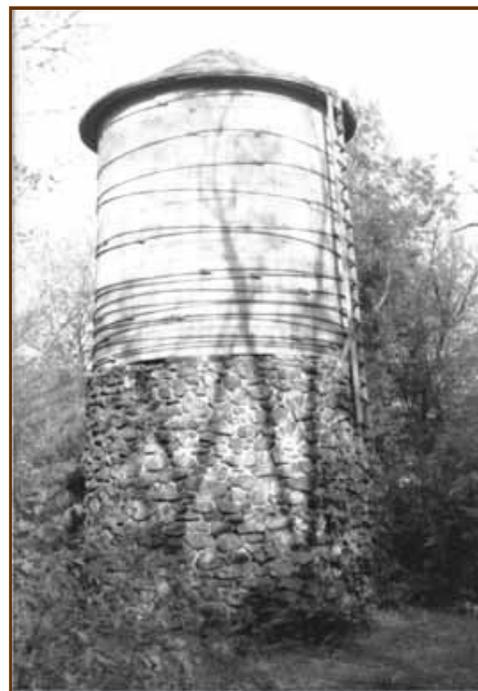

Dimensions Approx. 40 feet tall - 12 feet in circumference

Setting Set back in woods on an outcropping of ledge on Nason Hill

Condition Good

Original owner Possibly Henry Neale
Original use Water storage
Subsequent uses

Recorded July 1981

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE

This is one of the last water storage towers in Sherborn. It provided the Stannox Farm buildings (#11 Nason Hill Road) with gravity-fed water pressure. It was probably constructed during the late 19th century when Stannox Farm was owned by Henry Neale.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and REFERENCES

- Anne C. Shaughnessy - A Guide to Sherborn